My mother's sigh! It chides me now, In years now more matured; Unmov'd I stood by all the griefs And corrows she endured.
She sighed for me! oh! bitter thought!
When c'er! disobeyed.
Hertoving eyes would fill with tears,
And face for me she praved.

My mother's aight! its echo-comes
From out my immest soul;
Uniush'd remorse torever makes
That paintutecho roll.
She signed for me—unnumbered sighs—
They all unheeded were;
At last I broke her loving heart,
And never sighed for her!

Thy mother's sigh! oh, wayward youth, Win'er perchance thou art,

Beware—by all that's true—beware!

Grieve not thy mother's heart.

By all that's true, ere long and oft.

Before thou too shalt die,

Thou'll thear (unless in mercy hush'd)

The ccho of elect sigh!

They don't lar the'dogs nor children go into the parlor, and I think it's real mean; and I hal to creep under the sofa so nobody could see me; and Mr. Boyce came in, and Miss Jackson ; she said one day that children was worse nuisances than dogs. And Mr. Boyce and Miss Ja kson came in and sitted down on the sofa; and he said. "Oh. Louisa, I do love you so much." And then he kissd her, for I heard it smack. And then she said, "Oh, Thomas, I do wish I could believe you; don't you never kiss anybody else?" And he said, "No, dearest." And I yelled out, "On, what a big story! for I saw him kiss Bess e Nettle's nurse in the hail one night when the gas was turned down."
